The West Virginia Debt. Here comes up again that interminable

"But there is a statement made by the Senator [Johnston] to which we desire to call the attention of the Richmond Dispatch and all other Virginia papers that have taken such frequent occasion to deride and denounce the West Virginia position in regard to the Virginia debt."

Bless us, we had no idea that we had that State was to pay only in proportion to Senator says:

Virginia for two thirds of the debt, and to take West Virginia certificates for the other third, Virginia made an excellent bargain, for she held all the assets of the old State, the capitol, the chief cities, the penitentiary, the asylums, the institutions of learning, nearly all the railroads, the navigable rivers, and the great harbor of Norfolk, the value of which, as a source of future wealth and development, cannot be estimated. Therefore she at least ought to enterprises. It will elevate the general have been satisfied, especially as the creditione of thought among our people in all

We have said the same. West Virginia was entitled to credit for her share of all the property belonging to the old State. It was indeed "an excellent bargain" for ground to affirm, it is a consummation long Virginia which released her from one third devoutly wished. This triumph we owe of all the debt.

NORTH CAROLINA IN ITS TRUE LIGHT .-Here comes up again that interminable discussion upon the West Virginia debt and the questions pertaining to it. The Wheeling Intelligencer says:

About Carolina is all length ground for congratulation to the people of our State that North Carolina is at length placed in her true aspect before the world. Hitherto she has been known to the world at large only in that aspect in which she was placed by the one book which is put into the hands of all—the school geography. In this book she has been exhibited in print and picture as producing little else than tar, pitch, and turpentine. Now she is seen to have made rapid strides in developing the advantages with which she is so signally favored. In all the great elements been so cruel to West Virginia. When did nally favored.
